Subject: Evaluation Report - [REDACTED]

STATINTL

STATINTL

[REDACTED] officially joined the Seminar as CIA Faculty Representative and Adviser on July 29, 1974. To the present date he has served through the running of five three-week seminars. Throughout the period he has been Faculty Chairman for the European Regional Seminar, one of the geographically oriented groups into which the participating officers are assigned during each Seminar. I have worked closely with [REDACTED] throughout this period and have been impressed from the outset by his enthusiastic and conscientious dedication to the Seminar and its objectives, while fulfilling effectively his services to his Agency and its interests and requirements. He is diligent and serious about each task and exhibits at all times an understanding of and concern for the myriad of details which together add up to a smooth-running and well-organized Seminar. At the same time his low key humour and unobtrusive manner contribute comfortably to the harmony and integrity of this unique interdepartmental organization, in which he is his Agency's sole representative.

STATINTL

As CIA Representative, he has built upon and sustained the active involvement of his Agency in the Seminar. The regular Seminar visit each Session to Agency headquarters is increasingly well received by the participants and has become an essential fixed element of the total program. The success of this visit remains dependent on the continuing support of the highest Agency officials. We particularly appreciate Mr. Colby's backing and sustained personal involvement, along with the support of Ed Proctor and other high officials. [REDACTED] activity in relating to these officials and assisting them should be noted here.

STATINTL

CIA officer attendance in the course rose significantly in Fiscal Year 1975 to its highest point. With very few exceptions, most of the attendees have been active participants who contributed positively, thereby benefitting even more from their assignment here. [REDACTED] active role in working with these officers prior to and during their period here has been most beneficial to them and to us.

STATINTL

His leadership of the European Seminar has been particularly noteworthy. Because of his background and knowledge of the area, plus his experience in training activities, he was able to step in smoothly and take charge. He has been increasingly effective in this very important role as his first year here has gone on, and currently provides top-notch direction to his interagency group of 10-15 senior officers each session. Included in his performance are his own personal lectures and discussions of various Soviet-related or Sino-Soviet issues. Typical Seminar problems, such as the occasional over-balance of military vis-a-vis civilian officers, or an occasional student personality problem, do not seem to faze [REDACTED]

STATINTL

Within the small (five professional) interagency Faculty [REDACTED] has always carried his share or more of the administrative and other duties and is well respected by his colleagues. His ease and skill on the platform, as in introducing guest lecturers, is noteworthy and he is attentive to the courtesies to be observed in meeting and in dealing with visiting lecturers, senior government officials or private citizens alike.

3.

STATINTL

It should be particularly noted that [REDACTED] stopped in during my Deputy's absence for a few weeks and very capably took charge of the scheduling and arrangements for a substantial portion of the guest lecturers for the plenary sessions for the most recent (May 1975) Seminar. All of these arrangements were smoothly fulfilled and [REDACTED] conducted himself during this period so as to leave no doubt in my mind of his ability to serve in the Deputy position whenever called on.

STATINTL

Overall, [REDACTED] is a most valuable member of the Faculty and a clearly superior employee.
